About Dahlia's Song

Dahlia's Song is a florist, café, workshop studio and event space at 25 North Broadway in Tarrytown, New York, inside the historic Washington Irving Trust building. The flowers come from the family's own cut-flower farm in Cortlandt Manor, about twenty minutes away, where more than 400 varieties of dahlia are grown alongside zinnias, cosmos, celosia and foliage.

Owner and founder Linh Hoang spent years growing flowers and meeting customers at local farmers markets before opening the shop in summer 2026. The idea is simple: flowers, coffee and things made by hand, under one roof, in a room people want to stay in.

What we do

Flowers

A florist with its own farm. Hand-tied bouquets and arrangements are made on North Broadway with flowers cut at the family's cut-flower farm in Cortlandt Manor, where more than 400 dahlia varieties are grown. Order online for pickup or delivery; same-day in Tarrytown and the Rivertowns, with routes across Westchester, Rockland, Bergen County NJ and Fairfield County CT. Wedding and event flowers and a seasonal dahlia subscription are offered by consultation.

Café

A café inside the flower shop. Vietnamese phin coffee brewed to order, espresso drinks, Harney & Sons teas, house-made chai and matcha lattes, smoothies with no added sugar and cold-pressed juices, plus a small food menu. Seating is among the flowers, with Wi-Fi.

Workshops

Small-group floral and craft workshops taught in the studio: hand-tied bouquets, seasonal arrangements, wreaths and pressed-flower projects. Tools and materials are provided and everyone takes home what they make. Private workshops can be booked for teams and celebrations.

Events

The studio hosts kids' parties (four hands-on packages for ages 4 to 14), showers, birthdays and corporate gatherings, seating up to 25 with a full coffee bar, screen and speakers. The team also styles picnics and parties off site and designs wedding flowers across the Hudson Valley.
